Reading of the Flowers

An annual event on the last Sunday in May.
Bring a flower to service that day and lay it on the table provided. Someone will pick up the flower and give a reading from it without knowing who brought it. Your flower will be returned.

Bereavement - By William Penn 1693
Quaker Faith and Practice, Chapter 22 Verse 95

The truest end of life, is to know the life that never ends. Those that make this their care, will find it their crown at last. Those that live to live ever, never fear dying: nor can the means be terrible to them that heartily believe the end.

For though death be a dark passage, it leads to immortality, and that is recompense enough for the suffering of it. Faith lights us, even through the grave, being the evidence of things not seen.<sup>1</sup>

And this is the comfort of the good, that the grave cannot hold them, and that they live as soon as they die. For death is no more than a turning of us over from time to eternity. Death, then, being the way and condition of life, we cannot love to live, if we cannot bear to die.

They that love beyond the world cannot be separated by it. Death cannot kill what never dies. Nor can spirits ever be divided that love and live in the same Divine Principle, the root and record of their friendship. ...

Death is but crossing the world, as friends do the seas; they live in one another still. For they must needs be present, that love and live in that which is omnipresent. In this divine glass, they see face to face<sup>2</sup>; and their converse is free, as well as pure.

This is the comfort of friends, that though they may be said to die, yet their friendship and society are, in the best sense, ever present, because immortal.

Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.

<sup>2</sup> Paul – 1 Corinthians 13:12

For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face
